Subject Overview

This subject introduces the multidisciplinary nature of the field of hospitality studies and encourages students to investigate the concept of hospitality beyond the commercial domain. Historical, cultural and political influences are explored through the lens of a range of disciplines including anthropology, sociology, geography and cultural studies. Core academic and research skills are embedded in this unit through the introduction of prescribed research activities.

Learning Outcomes

- Compare and contrast dimensions of hospitality from a temporal, cultural and gender perspective
- Differentiate between concepts of hospitality and service and the impact of social or financial obligation
- Distinguish between hedonic and non-hedonic hospitality and the relationship to power dimensions
- Conduct and communicate findings from a prescribed research task
