SUBJECT DESCRIPTION

This subject guides students through the issues faced by organisations in the food, hospitality, tourism and events industries so that students can apply this knowledge to investigate those issues in the context of behavioural sciences theories, concepts and principles as they apply to these industries. Following a behavioural sciences approach it focuses on examining the behaviours and performance of individuals and groups in organisational settings, and the impact of organisational culture, job design and organisational structure on effectiveness. It is delivered by a formal 2 hour lecture followed by a 2 hour hands-on tutorial. Previous students have commented on how helpful this has been in learning these skills early in their studies and how well they can relate theory to their work experiences.
